St Thomas Aquinas' three things necessary for our salvation: "to know what to believe, to know what to desire and to know what to do". Of course, Aquinas is not the first one to stress the importance of knowledge. It is also expressed in the familiar Delphic oracle, "Know thyself", or in Laozi's saying, "To know others is wise; to know oneself is enlightenment."

What knowledge or understanding does Christianity offer us? Our Lord shows us how to be truly human. By His words and actions, He also reveals the mystery of God. In today's Gospel, Jesus attempts to educate our desires, our motivations, as well as instructs us in what we ought to believe about Himself.

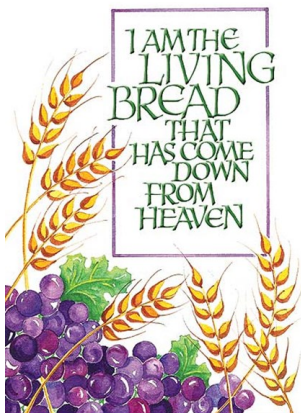

We find ourselves attracted to God for different reasons. Some of us look for peace and consolation. Others try to make the world a more just and a better place. Some still find in the faith an insightful structure influencing their family life or the education of their children. All these motivations are good in themselves. But there is one motivation, one desire, that needs to crown all these in order for us to fully embrace the discipleship of Christ. That fundamental desire is for God Himself, The Living Bread.

If we truly embrace the knowledge that Christ is the Head of His Body the Church, then we need to long to be ever closer to Him. We are called to be Christ-like in the way we think, act, and in the way we treat each other. This is the new life that St. Paul talks about: "You must give up your old way of life; you must put aside your old self, which gets corrupted by following illusory desires. Your mind must be renewed by a spiritual revolution so that you can put on the new self that has been created in God's way, in the goodness and holiness of the truth."

The life that the Apostle speaks about flows from the revelation of Christ: He is sent, given to us, so that we may flourish as one body. He lives in us - this is what we ought to believe; He is coming back in glory - this is what we ought to desire; He left us His Good News and His own Body and Blood to be shared around the world - this is what we ought to do.

STEWARDSHIP REFLECTION

“Each day the people are to go out and gather their daily portion; thus will I test them, to see whether they follow my instructions or not.”

Exodus 16:4

When the Israelites gathered more than their daily portion of manna, the surplus became wormy and rotten.

In the same way today, self-reliance, pride, and ego lead to hoarding and excessive surplus of goods and money.
 Living a stewardship lifestyle helps us discern our “wants” from our “needs”. Living a generous lifestyle reminds us that God will provide all that we need and that we have plenty to share.
